

Possible Analogy between the Excitation Spectra of Nuclei and Those of the Superconducting Metallic State

A. BOHR, B. R. MOTTelson, AND D. PINES*

Institute for Theoretical Physics, University of Copenhagen, Copenhagen, Denmark, and Nordisk Institut for Teoretisk Atomfysik, Copenhagen, Denmark

(Received January 7, 1958)

The evidence for an energy gap in the intrinsic excitation spectrum of nuclei is reviewed. A possible analogy between this effect and the energy gap observed in the electronic excitation of a superconducting metal is suggested.

